ROOSEVELT SCORES BOSSES

Flays Wilson Administration and Its Policies.

In First Speech of 1914 Campaign Declares Tariff Colossal Failure—Hard on Farmers.

Pittsburg, June 30.—Theodore Roosevelt delivered tonight the first political address that has come from him since his return from Brazil. It was divided, generally speaking, into three parts—an attack on the Wilson administration, an indictment of "bosses," and an exposition of the principles of the Progressive party.

It was apparent as soon as Colonel Roosevelt began to speak that he did not possess his former strength and vigor. There was a noticeable change in his manner as compared with that of two years ago. After the first few sentences he spoke tonight with apparent ease, but there was a huskiness in his voice that showed his throat was still troubling him. His gestures were less rapid and vigorous than of old and as he neared the end of his speech, he was plainly weary.

The administration's tariff laws Colonel Roosevelt hailed as a colossal failure, particularly hard upon the farmer; its anti-trust program he branded as an economic absurdity. Its foreign policy he styled as "wretched," but upon this he did not elaborate. The Democratic tariff, he insisted, had brought distress upon the nation, had not lowered the cost of living, and had chiefly benefited foreign rivals of American business. The solution rested, he argued in support of the Progressive movement and the enactment of laws providing for tariff revision by a non-partisan commission.

Of the "bosses," Mr. Roosevelt said what has heretofore—that they thwarted the rank and file of the Republican party by the nomination of Taft at Chicago and in so doing "deliberately put the Democratic organization and Mr. Wilson into power."

In conclusion the colonel sketched the Progressive idea of needed anti-trust regulation by properly empowered commissions, contrasting such proposals with legislation now pending at Washington, which he found woefully inadequate. Such a program (he) he contended, proved the inadequacy of the Democratic party. "It is, and always will be," he said, "the state's rights party, the Party afraid of power."

Yet the colonel warned those dissatisfied with the administration not through their resentment to throw their support to the leaders he had attacked. To do so, he said, would only insure a continuation of "government by confusion, of a government seen-saw between two sets of policies."

He spoke at length concerning those whom the Progressives would welcome to the party. "We will gladly work," he said, with any man who will themselves, with open sincerity, work for these (Progressive) principles, provided they are men of such character as to justify confidence in their good faith. In this spirit we ask all good citizens to cooperate with us, as here in Pennsylvania, we hold aloft the flag of good citizenship in the fight to translate these sound and lofty principles into governmental practice."

Colonel Roosevelt came here to speak in support of the candidacy of Duff-Lewis for governor, and of Clifford Pinchot for United States senator. Their qualifications he touched upon at the opening of his speech. Thereafter he confined himself to the national issues outlined.

Rays Explode Mine.

Guila Urivi carried out new experiments at Florence Thursday with his invention for blowing up powder magazines and explosives mixed in metal by means of ultra-violet rays projected from a distance. While Admiral Fornari was sinking four mines to two-third their depth in the River Arno, the inventor transported his apparatus to Mount Senario, ten miles away, and placed it behind the hill town of Fiesole, thus adding to the obstacles between himself and the explosives.

Within a half hour after receiving signal, Urivi, by his projector, exploded the mines. Admiral Fornari then subjected the system to further stringent test by sinking in various parts of the river a number of metal bombs containing explosives, which he prepared himself. Though the task presented enormous difficulties, owing to the conformation of the river, the young engineer from his position on the mountain took only a quarter of an hour each case to scour the river bed with the rays and locate the bombs.

Urivi is about to start experimenting with a new apparatus capable of blowing up any explosive within a radius of eighty miles.

Mexican Invaders of 1848.

If there are any old Mexicans alive who witnessed the entrance of Gen. Scott's Americans into Vera Cruz in 1848, they must have imagined that they were looking at a different race of human beings as they watched the review of Funston's soldiers the other day. Times have changed since 1848, and soldiers have changed with them.

Fancy the American Militiamen marching into Vera Cruz under Scott. Many of them wore the old fashioned shakos, eight inches high above the head, made of black velvet or beaver, harder, thicker and heavier than a dress top coat hat of the present day, with leather tips at top, leather bands all around and sometimes a brass crest for a pom-pom—altogether an enormous and heavy contrivance. If, instead of these shakos, the men wore fatigue caps, the caps were scarcely less bulky, hot and heavy. The shakos or caps the men wore under the burning Mexican suns, they wore them into the battle at Cerro Gordo and at Chapultepec.

Even their fatigue jackets were heavy woolen cloth, with standing collars; and around their bodies the men wore cross belts of leather. Not a detail of their clothing was planned for ease, but all for the parade. And on their backs they carried knapsacks which only a strong man could bear and stand erect. The rigid cartridge boxes on the hip.

Answers "No" for Second Time.

Washington, June 30.—Five hundred members of the General Federation of Women's clubs marched to the White House today and drew from President Wilson his final refusal to accede to the demands that he support the movement for the woman suffrage amendment to the federal constitution. President Wilson reiterated his statement to the previous delegations that his party had not embodied this question in its platform, and then for the first time announced his personal conviction that the suffrage issue was one for settlement by states and not by the federal government.

No Demand, No Market.

Tariff reductions on or the free-lifting of articles do not always work out according to calculations. If there is no demand for such articles the lowering or removal of tariff duties accomplishes nothing. The case of lace-making machinery is an illustration. In the Tariff of 1909 such machinery bore a duty of 45 per cent, with a special provision that no duty should be paid on imports up to January 1, 1911. In the Tariff of 1913 the duty on lace-making machines was reduced to 25 per cent. The exemption from duty in the act of 1909 was intended to promote the lace manufacturing industry in the United States. It had no such effect. Neither did the Tariff reduction to 25 per cent in the Underwood law. One of the largest of American concerns imported over $300,000 worth, foreign value, of lace-making machines, and other concerns made large importations. The bulk of these importations have never been taken out of bond. There is no market for them. For two reasons: First, because even at a duty of 60 per cent on lace foreign manufacturers, paying one-third the American wage rate, could undersell the American manufacturers second, because in these times of Free-Trade depression American purchasing power has fallen off. American are not able to buy as many laces as they were in Protection prosperity times.

TWENTY SKELETONS ON ABANDONED SHIP

Captain of British Vessel Reports Weird Discoveries In Straits.

London.—A weird story of the sea has been briefly cabled from New Zealand. It is the story of the finding of the sailing ship Marlborough with twenty skeletons on board.

The Marlborough, a Glasgow-owned bark, belonging to Messrs. Leslie & Co., sailed from Lyttelton, New Zealand, with several passengers and a crew of thirty-five under the command of Capt. Hird in January, 1890. She was homeward bound by the Cape Horn route and was spoken in mid-ocean in the Southern Pacific after which no other word of her was ever heard.

In April of that year she was posted as missing, and later on was given up as having been lost around the Horn, where the bones of many a good ship and many a hundred seamen lie. A Government cruiser searched the rocky and tortuous coasts of Patagonia, but no trace of her was found. The Marlborough became just another of the thousand mysteries of the sea.

A day or two ago another British sailing ship arrived in Lyttelton with the story that she had found the Marlborough and the skeletons of twenty of her crew in one of the rocky coves near Punta Arenas (San Diego Point) in the Magellan Strait. The captain is quoted as telling the story in the following words: "We were off the rocky coasts near Punta Arenas, keeping near the land for shelter. The coasts are deep and silent, the sailing difficult and dangerous.

"We rounded a point into a deep cove. Before us a mile or more across the water stood a sailing vessel with the barest shroud of canvas fluttering in the breeze.

"We signaled and moved to. No answer came. We searched the strait with our glasses. Not a soul could we see, not a movement of any sort.

"Masts and yards were picked out in green—the green of decay. "At last we came up. There was no sign of life on board. After an interval our first mate with a member of the crew boarded her. The sight that met their gaze was thrilling.

"Below the wheel lay the skeleton of a man. Treading warily on the rotten deck, which cracked and broke in places as they walked, they encountered three skeletons in the hatchway.

"In the messroom were the remains of ten bodies, and six were found, one alone, possibly that of the captain, on the bridge.

"There was an uncanny stillness around and a rank smell of mould which made the flesh creep. A few remnants of books were discovered in the captain's cabin and a rusty cut-las.

"Nothing more weird in the history of the sea can ever have been seen. The first mate examined the still faint letters on the bows and after much trouble read Marlborough, Glasgow."

Punta Arenas is a pretty large place, as South American towns go. It has a population of several thousands and, of course, the Magellan Strait is a great highway traversed by hundreds of ships yearly, which take this way to avoid doubling the Horn with its furious gales.

The whole of the Magellan Strait, from Cape Horn to Cape Pillar, is familiar to thousands of seamen and indented and rockbound though it is it seems incredible that a ship could be concealed for nearly a quarter of a century in that part 'near' in places like Punta Arenas.

Had the discovery been made among the desolate and multitudinous islets of the Cockburn Channel or down about Cook Bay or False Cape Horn—perhaps the wildest coasts in the world—it would have been more credible. Indeed, shortly after the ship was lost there was a report that the crew of a passing ship saw seamen signaling from an island down that way which is 300 or 400 miles from Punta Arenas.

PAYS FORTUNE TELLER $7,200; NO GOLD YET

Man Sues to Recover From Soothsayer Who Couldn't Locate Money.

St. Louis.—Keysey Marriott, formerly postmaster of Browns, Ill., claims he paid Mrs. Augusta Pellinski and other clairvoyants of this city $7,200 to locate a hidden treasure near Browns. They failed to find the gold and the reason they gave, according to Marriott, was that more money was needed to keep the "spirits" in good humor.

Marriott has filed suit in the St. Louis Circuit Court against Mrs. Pellinski, who has an elegant home in the fashionable section of this city, to recover $2,000 of the money he claims he paid her.

There is a tradition around Browns that more than a hundred years ago the Indians or the French buried $200,000, wrapped in a bearskin, in an open space at the foot of a hill between the timber and the bank of Bonnas Creek.

Marriott, the postmaster, often heard the old residents talk about it as they waited for their mail. He had a friend, L. D. Leach, a business man of Golden Gate, twelve miles away, who often drove over in his automobile. They decided to call a clairvoyant into the case.

"I was directed to a clairvoyant at Olney by a friend," says Marriott. "This clairvoyant said there was a lot of money hidden near Browns and agreed to locate it if I would pay his expenses there. He went there and we drove out to Bonnas Creek. As we were walking in an open space between a hill and the creek a rabbit jumped up and the clairvoyant said 'Stop! Here's the place. Last night the spirits showed me where the treasure was buried and I saw a rabbit jump up by a stump. There's the stump. That's the place to dig.'"

"He leaned over and scratched around in the dirt and picked up a handful of hair. 'There's your bearskin,' he said. He unwrapped it and there was a piece of gold about four inches long in the shape of a duck. Leastways it looked like gold and he said it was gold.

"We didn't find any more gold and in a couple of days the professor—that's what he called himself—went home. We gave him $200 and he kept promising to come back. Finally he directed me to a clairvoyant in St. Louis. This one also agreed to find the treasure if we would pay his expenses. Finally he, too, said he could do nothing more and told me to go see Mrs. Pellinski. He said she could find anything.

"I went to her house and she told me all about the hidden treasure. I am satisfied now that the professor telephoned to her while I was on my way to see her. She said there must be a million dollars there! The professor came later and they told me they could combine their powers and do anything. They agreed to find the hidden gold for $1,000. I wrote to Leach and he gave me $1,000 to give them.

"When I asked her what assurance we had that we would get anything for our money she said her word was as good as gold. She wrote me several times that she was making sacrifices to keep the spirits in good humor. I wrote her for me and said she couldn't do anything more without more money. She wanted $6,000. I wrote to Leach and he came over with the money. I gave her $3,000 and the professor the same amount. She told us we would find the treasure within forty days.

"When the spirits were ready," she said, "they would raise the treasure right up out of the ground. She told us to go out to the creek and see if the ground was raising now. If it was, we were to let her know, and she would come right over. We waited and looked, but the ground hadn't raised any, so that you could notice it.

"Finally she said the spirits had got mixed up somehow and they wouldn't help her find the treasure unless she had $3,900 more to make sacrifices. "The last time I saw her she said she hadn't been well and could not work with the spirits, but I could see that there wasn't anything at all the matter with her. After that I wrote several letters to her, but she did not answer them. I don't think now that either one of them could find treasure. I believe they were just leading us on."

Mystery of the Divining Rod.

Few questions have aroused more interest and discussion than has that of whether or not there is "anything" in the use of the divining rod as a means of discovering underground water or buried metals. Many communities, especially in pioneer days, have had their "water witches," who, with wands of hazel or birch, prospected for underground streams of water, to the entire satisfaction of themselves and their neighbors.

Usually these "witches" and their supporters insist that the magic wand never fails to locate a good stream of water near the surface, but skeptical-minded, practical people find it difficult to believe that the wand has anything to do with locating it, arguing that similar results can be obtained merely by digging in a location that is convenient until water is found.

Scientific men in the past have generally regarded such means of locating water or metals underground as utterly foolish and unreliable, but experience in the realm of science of late has taught them to be more cautious in all matters concerning which they have no positive, definite knowledge. Instead of the negative attitude of former times they are beginning to display more and more an unprejudiced interest in all phases of phenomena.

In one experiment a brass pendulum suspended by a string and held over a copper plate connected with an electric cell was found either to be set to vibrating or to be checked in its motion, depending on whether the charge of the plate was positive or negative. It was noted that similar effects could be obtained with the divining rod, depending on whether the plate was charged negatively or positively.

Two silver coins, when placed either singly or one on top of the other, were found to repel a whalebone divining rod and set in vibration a pendulum consisting of a watch and chain. When the two coins were separated by placing between them two matches which served as a dielectric and made a sort of condenser of the combination, their effect on the pendulum and the divining rod was lost. By placing a thin thread in contact with the coins, however, the condenser effect was counteracted and the pendulum and wand displayed the phenomena as before.

The experimenters, by means of the rod, were able to ascertain the height above the floor of a piece of paper held at varying heights in the hands of a third person in an adjoining room.

Psychology and Empty Cars.

Eighty thousand empty freight cars are detracked along the lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad. They are idle because the business of the country, under the beneficent rule of near Free-Trade, is in such a condition that it cannot give them employment.

Most assuredly the management of the Pennsylvania is exceedingly incompetent. Haven't it yet heard of the way out of such a serious condition? What have its president and board of directors been doing all this time? Don't they know that the administration at Washington has given them the remedy? Take a dose of psychology—shake the bottle well before taking. And don't be put off with something else "just as good." See to it that the name of Dr. Wilson is blown in the glass.

Just take a dose of the Wilson remedy, go to sleep somewhere in the misty cloudlands of theory in habit by the most excellent doctrine and dream that those 80,000 cars are moving.

And then, watch them move!—Philadelphia Inquirer.

IS OVERCOME BY ASSASSINATION

Emperor Francis Joseph Grieves for Favorite Son.

Archduke Ferdinand and Wife Victims of Cowardly Street Attack.

Vienna, Austria, June 29.—Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the Austrian-Hungarian throne, and the Duchess of Hohenberg, his morganatic wife, were assassinated Sunday by a student in the streets of Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital, a short time after they had escaped death from a bomb hurled at the royal automobile.

As a result of the assassination the Austrian government declared a state of anarchy today. Many arrests were made in this and other cities throughout Austria, and the secret government police and the military authorities maintained the strictest precautions.

Emperor Francis Joseph, accompanied by his suite, arrived here at noon from Ischl, and as once took into his own hands the direction of affairs.

At Amstettin, lower Austria, Francis Salvator, Archduke of Austria-Tuscany, with his imperial suite, boarded a train on which the aged emperor came to Vienna. They traveled as far as Sankt Pölten and gave what comfort they could to Francis Joseph. To them the grieving monarch exclaimed: "My troubles are endless."

The wife of Archduke Francis Salvator is Archduchess Maria Valerie, a daughter of the emperor.

Austria has been plunged into the deepest gloom by the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, who was popular with the people. Five were at half mast, public functions were canceled and government buildings were draped in black and closed. The court probably will go into mourning for a year.

The attention of Europe now centers upon the new heir to the Austrian throne, Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, the twenty-seven-year-old son of Archduke Otto, who came to Vienna with his wife to condole with the aged, grief-stricken monarch.

Prinz, the eighteen-year-old boy who fired the revolver shot which ended the lives of the archduke and his wife, was subjected to the severest examination by the Austrian police in Bosnia. To most of the questions Prinz gave flippant replies, but he made no secret of his hatred for Austria.

Both Bosnia and Herzegovina will some day be a part of the Serbian kingdom," he declared at one time during the examination.

Gabrinovic, who had made an unsuccessful attempt to kill Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Duchess of Hohenberg by throwing a bomb, was also put through a grueling examination by the police. He is a Serbian and admitted that he was in a plot to kill the archduke.

The bodies of the two victims remained at Sarajevo to-day. They will be brought here on a special train, escorted in a manner befitting the high rank of the heir to the throne.

From Best to Worst.

When President Wilson says the industrial depression is psychological and world-wide, he makes a general statement which is not borne out by facts. Great Britain, for instance, has not for some time enjoyed such prosperity as that of to-day. Other countries, too, are enjoying an unusual business impetus. In short, from being a country of the greatest poverty and prosperity, we have fallen to one having the least. And with no signs of betterment, till the ad nauseam Tariff, now doing such deadly work, is repealed.

ENERGY IN ATOMS

Likened to Infinite Power in an Infinitesimal Space.

EACH ONE IS A TINY WORLD.

If All Should Burst Their Walls at Once the Universe Would Dissolve in an Instant—A Magic Force That Science is Seeking to Control.

Do you remember when Aladdin had, at last, got down into the cave under the tree, what inexpressible marvels he found around him? But among all the riches of the cave there was only one little dust-covered thing that was really worth the risk he had run, because it alone was truly novel and unlike anything else in the world—the magic lamp that had the genie for its slave. With that in his possession the poor boy was more powerful than all the monarchs in the world—provided that he knew how to handle the lamp, and that knowledge came to him by accident.

I have just been pondering over some statements by Jean Becquerel, the French physicist, about the contents of the atoms of which matter is composed, and they have forcibly recalled Aladdin's adventures to my mind. The interior of an atom is a little world infinitely more marvelous than the cave that contained the magic lamp, and it conceals powers incomparably greater than that of Aladdin's good genie.

To the scientific imagination the inside of an atom is inversely as wondrous as the starry heavens. It is infinite power packed into infinitesimal space. That, of course, is an exaggeration; but this is a case in which one has to speak in imposing figures, because the facts surpass all ordinary experience.

"The atom," says Jean Becquerel, "is a closed world, or almost closed, and it is that fact which constitutes its individuality."

This "closed world" of the atom is so small that if we could increase the powers of our microscopes a thousandfold we could not render it visible, and yet that minute speck of matter incloses a "solar system" as elaborate as that of the great sun with its planets, and keeps locked up there an energy so colossal that the plainest statements of fact that can be made about it seem like wild dreams.

"The emanation from radium" is substance whose atoms spontaneously give out at least a part of their energy. It is capable of liberating 2,500,000 times more energy than the most violent chemical reaction known.

The world within the atom ordinarily behaves as if it had no concern with the world outside. It is sufficient unto itself. It is a little medieval China, with closed ports and insurmountable walls all round. Still, a very few atoms, like those of radium, have a tendency to communicate with the outer world by a kind of explosion.

If all atoms should burst their walls simultaneously the whole universe would be dissolved in an instant.

The atom that disintegrates passes from change to change. Within their limits the foundations of matter are broken up; the distinctions of the fundamental elements are confounded; things lose their nature and shift into other things; uranium gives birth to radium and to polonium; radium brings forth helium, and the last transformation of polonium that has thus far been observed is into plain lead. It is like a transmigration of atomic souls.

But this is not the only consequence of the opening of the world of the atom. That opening releases energy in forms which we can recognize and which some day perhaps we may be able to utilize.

Atomic energy is the magic lamp that the Aladdin of science has found in nature's secret cave.

One day Aladdin's mother found the rusty lamp where he had cast it aside as useless and thought that she would polish it up. Instantly, at the first vigorous rub, the slave of the lamp stood before her, ready to do her bidding!

The Aladdin of science has not thrown his lamp aside. He knows it is full of magic. He is sure that if he rubs it aright the genie will appear before him, but he has not yet learned the right stroke. And perhaps after all it will be with him as it was with the other Aladdin—accident will teach him the secret.

When that day comes, if ever it does, there will hardly be any limit to the transforming power of man over the world he lives in—Garrett P. Servis in New York Journal.

Warned Against Coffee.

Once upon a time people wanted state wide prohibition of coffee. In his book, "London in English Literature," Percy H. Boynton says of the old coffee houses:

"As the number of them increased, broadsides appeared against them. One was entitled 'The Woman's Petition Against Coffee,' and it asserted that coffee drinking encouraged idling and talkativeness and led men to trifle away their time, send their wives and spend their money, all for a little base, black, thick, nasty, bitter, aqueous puddle water!"

BEAUTY OF THE HUDSON.

Its Picturesque Scenery Far Surpasses That of the Rhine.

The Hudson river is very remarkable in several respects. In the first place, for 150 miles of its length it is not a true river but a fjord. From Albany to the ocean its rock bottom, with the exception of a few shoals, is below sea level. How far below, it is not accurately known. Opposite Storm King mountain engineers bored a thousand feet down into the dry and sand that fill the gorge under the water and did not find rock bottom. The shore line at Albany is at practically the same elevation as the shore line at New York, and the tide rises at Albany two and eight-tenths feet. The upward and downward flowing of the tide, of which Hudson took advantage in his voyage, had long been noticed by the Indians, who spoke of the river with wonder as the stream that flowed both ways.

The river is unsurpassed for its great natural beauty. The distinguished German surgeon, Dr. Adolph Lorenz, in 1902 declared it more beautiful than the Rhine, which depends on the castles on its banks for its main charm. Primarily, the beauty of the Hudson is due to the extraordinary range of its geological history. From its source to the sea it is an epitome of creation. It rises in the Adirondack mountains, which tower to a great height. The famous Highlands of the Hudson, between which Hudson sailed 300 years ago, are of the same Archæan rocks and were once a group of islands. The Catskills are more modern and the Palisades still younger. The latter rising sheer 300 to 500 feet above the water's edge, were once a fiery molten mass and their columnar shape is due to the manner in which the mass cooled off.

These facts indicate what a storehouse for fascinating research the Hudson valley is for the person, young or old, who will study it with the mind as well as with the eye.—Edith Towne and Kaufmann in Leslie's.

SOLONS AND SALARIES.

Some European States Pay Their Lawmakers Only a Mite.

Italy and Spain are the only European countries which offer no monetary reward to their members of parliament. The Portuguese legislators are not remunerated by the state, but they have a free pass for traveling on all railways in the country, and their constituencies are permitted to pay a sum equivalent to 15 shillings for each day's sitting.

Denmark is another country which believes that its political gentlemen are ready to work for almost nothing. Members of parliament there only receive 6 shillings per day, but they have the peculiar privilege of a free seat in the Royal theater in Copenhagen.

The Norwegian honorable member is thankful for a daily income of 12 shillings, though he must do his duty properly to get it. He loses a day's pay when he takes a day off. Members of the Swiss diet work under the same threat. If they are absent they lose salary which amounts in their case to 16 shillings per day.

Roumania pays her lawmakers a sovereign per day, and Bulgaria offers 16 shillings. In the latter country members living in the capital have 4 shillings deducted because they have no train fares to pay and only one home to keep up.

Hungary treats her statesmen just half as well as England does, allowing them £200 per annum. They have, however, a liberal allowance for house rent and can travel first class with second class tickets.—London Tit-Bits.

Keeping Your Word.

The following quotation from De Morgan's "When Ghost Meets Ghost" may help a few to see the moral issue more clearly. Mr. Jerry began feebly, "You can't do more than keep your word, Mo." "Mo, a fine old ex-prizefighter, replied:

"Yes, you can, Jerry. You can keep your meanin'. And you can do more than that. You can keep to what the other party thought you meant, when you know. I know this time, I ain't in a court of justice, Jerry, dodgin' about, and I know when I'm square by the feet."

Played With Fire Balls.

For many centuries polo, or bhugan, as it was then called, was a favorite pastime with Asiatic rulers. A contemporary annalist records of Akbar, the greatest of Mogul emperors, that "he plays at chaugan on dark nights, the balls being set on fire. For the sake of adding splendour to the game his majesty has knobs of gold and silver fixed to the chaugan sticks. If one of these breaks any player that gets hold of the pieces may keep them."

Good Advice.

"Young man," said the boss, "come hither and listen." He approached. "When you've made a mistake forget it and go on to the next job. Don't pester around all day adding a lot of finishing touches."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Frightened.

WOMEN CAN HARDLY BELIEVE

How Mrs. Hurley Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Eldon, Mo.—"I was troubled with displacement, inflammation and female weakness. For two years I could not stand on my feet long at a time and I could not walk two blocks without enduring cutting and drawing pains down my right side which increased every month. I have been at that time purple in the face and would walk the floor. I could not lie down or sit still sometimes for a day and a night at a time. I was nervous, and had very little appetite, no ambition, melancholy, and often felt as though I had not a friend in the world. After I had tried most every female remedy without success, my mother-in-law advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and gained in strength every day. I have now no trouble in any way and highly praise your medicine. It advertises itself."—Mrs. S. T. HURLEY, Eldon, Missouri.

SPECIAL TO WOMEN

The most economical, cleansing and germicidal of all antiseptics is

Paxtine

A soluble Antiseptic Powder to be dissolved in water as needed.

As a medicinal antiseptic for douches in treating catarrh, inflammation or ulceration of nose, throat, and that caused by feminine ill it has no equal. For ten years the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. has recommended Paxtine in their private correspondence with women, which proves its superiority. Women who have been cured say it is "worth its weight in gold." At druggists, 50c. large box, or by mail. The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

FRIDAY, JULY 3.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

We are authorized to announce Congressman Ben Johnson a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Representative from the 4th Congressional district. General primary election August 1, 1914.

We are authorized to announce Hon. John W. Boyd, of Hardin county, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Representative in Congress, from the 4th district. General Primary election August 1, 1914.

We are authorized to announce W. SHERMAN BALL, of Breckenridge county, a candidate for the Republican nomination for Representative in Congress from the Fourth district. General Primary election August 1, 1914.

Mexico suffers from lack of work. Every General wants to play a lone hand.

Tomorrow is the glorious Fourth. We trust all our readers may enjoy a "same" day, with no accidents.

How is Secretary Bryn going to square the sale of those war ships to Greece, with his peace policies?

Under the eugenic law no Kentuckian could expect to get a marriage license unless he tested 100 proof.

When Congress passes the trust legislation, what new excuse will the President find for keeping it in session?

A bill to require automobiles to be so constructed as that they could not exceed twelve miles an hour would receive a lot of enthusiastic support from people who don't own automobiles.

And now the mediators have adopted the "watchful waiting policy." However, they have nothing on any citizen of the United States in that respect. Are we not all watching and waiting for President Wilson's era of unparalleled prosperity?

The suffragettes just won't let the President Alone. They cannot see how he can advocate tolls repeal and other things not in the party platform, but can do nothing for women's suffrage because it is not included in the Baltimore platform.

In this issue of The Republican we announce (Hon. W. Sherman Ball, of Breckenridge county, a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress in this district. Mr. Ball is well known throughout the district and State, having served as Assistant Secretary of State during the Wilson administration under Ben L. Bruner. He is a lifelong Republican, though in favor of many of the Progressive principles. He was county clerk of Breckenridge county two terms and was until recently Post Master at Hardinsburg. In all the positions of trust which he has held he has discharged his duties faithfully and in the interest of the people. If nominated he will make a strong race with good chances of winning in November.

The Louisville Herald chides us for favoring what it calls that amalgamation foolishness and in the next breath quotes with evident approval a rumor that the Progressives and Democrats will unite in the eleventh district to defeat a Republican. All Progressives and Republicans in this neck of the woods believe that prosperity can only be restored by a return to a protective tariff and regard that as the paramount issue and one upon which they can unite. Hence they will amalgamate whether the leaders will or won't. The Herald will find after the election that the rank and file of Republicans and Progressives are of the attitude of the hen which as is well known, when determined to "set" will set if she has to stand up and set. The Herald and a few misguided leaders are standing in the way of any compromise, and furnishing aid to the Democrats. The people will know upon whom to place the blame for continued success of governmental control by a minority party.

Effects Appear in Visible Form.

The destructive effect of the new Democratic Tariff on the industries of Rhode Island appears in visible form in this year's assessed valuation of such property reported yesterday by the Board of Tax Commissioners to the General Treasurer for his collection of revenue therefrom.

Last year the corporate excess value of the State's manufacturing, mercantile and miscellaneous corporations was $138,167,928.65; this year it is $135,688,831.58. These values, which are the values of the stock of these corporations over and above what is tangible in their plants and merchandise, are obtained from sworn statements by the responsible managers, verified by the Tax Commissioners, and may be accepted as fair measures of the prosperity of the State's corporate industries.

This loss of nearly two and a half million dollars in the last 12 months means, therefore, that since the new Tariff got into full operation the industries of Rhode Island have lost just that much in money-making capacity—in other words, the Democratic schedules of customs duties have in one short year taken from the State that much wealth. It is not only the owners of this industrial property who suffer; it is the State Treasury also, and hence the service which the State Government can give to the people.

That it is a Tariff hostile to domestic industry that has caused this loss admits no question. With imports of cotton cloths doubled under the Wilson-Underwood law, as from $721,902 in value in March, 1913, to $1,402,071 in March, 1914 and with imports of woolen and worsted cloths increased in value at the rate, for example, of from $328,974 in March, 1913, to $1,296,910 in March 1914, it was inevitable that Rhode Island mills should be less prosperous and Rhode Island mill stocks less valuable.

The new Democratic Tariff has already stopped the increase of wealth in Rhode Island; continued in operation indefinitely it would mean the industrial ruin of the State.

What Business Men Say.

The President's harsh and unreasonable denunciation of American business men for writing letters to Washington asking for a cessation of legislative attacks on business called forth the following expressions by Philadelphia business men, as printed in the Public Ledger of June 17:

E. C. Felton: "The President's attitude of suppression of criticism is really outrageous. It is hard to realize that the head of this free Government should attempt to stifle the voice of the people."

William H. Folwell: "The President is high-handed and bull-headed."

Frederick L. Bailey: "This legislation is not constructive, it is destructive. It will not build up business; it will destroy business."

J. Hampton Moore: "They don't like the Tariff and they don't want any more legislation."

This latest exhibition of bad temper and bad judgment on the part of President Wilson provides fresh reasons why business men should get into politics. As a matter of self-preservation against theorists and demagogues the entrance of American business men into politics has become a necessity.

More Power to Them.

Cincinnati business men are arranging to go into politics. At a recent meeting of men prominent in the city's industrial affairs the intelligence of present members of Congress was severely criticized from a business standpoint. It was said that there are too many lawyers and not enough business men in Congress. Which is quite true. As a matter of fact, there are too many lawyers, anyhow. There would be less litigation if there were less lawyers. But in any event the Cincinnati movement is a good one. More business men in politics and in legislation would help matters greatly. If business men had been more plentiful in Congress the Underwood Tariff bill would not have been passed. Also, if there are enough business men elected to Congress this year and in 1916 the Underwood Tariff law will be repealed. More power to the business men!

Severe Attack of Colic Cured.

E. E. Cross, who travels in Virginia, and other Southern States, was taken suddenly and severely ill with colic. At the first store he came to the merchant recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it cured him. No one should leave home on a journey without a bottle of this preparation. For sale by all dealers.

MEDIATION

BLOWS UP

End of Farce At Niagara Falls.

Completion of Peace Now Rests With Mexicans Themselves.

Niagara Falls, June 30.—An indefinite recess of mediation was decided upon today by Ambassador Da Gama, of Brazil, and Ministers Saurez and Nacu of Chile, and Argentine respectively.

This action followed the receipt of a note from Carranza expressing an inclination to participate in informal conferences with the Mexican delegates, but asking for more time in which to consult his subordinate generals.

The Constitutionalist chief declared that he wished to get full authority from the signers of the plan of Guadalupe, the platform of the Constitutionalist movement, so the delegates might be clothed with plenary powers. He gave no inkling as to what length of time such a consultation might require.

Meantime the mediators prepared to take their departure. The Hurta delegates will decide tomorrow whether to wait here for the Constitutionalist delegates or to go to some summer resort in the United States for an interval.

The American delegates will be the last to leave. They are waiting definite instructions from Washington.

The mediators explained tonight that mediation had not adjourned, but that perhaps the last formal meeting had been held. Communication hereafter will be carried on by telegram from the respective homes of the mediators and delegates. The mediators consider their chief work done.

Originally the three diplomats tendered their good offices to avert war. This they think has been accomplished. The three envoys think that in devising a plan for informal conferences between the two factions their own task ended, and that the responsibility for the completion of a peace program rests on the Mexicans themselves.

Owensboro Optical House.

Land Sale For Taxes.

By virtue of taxes due me as Marshal of the town of Hartford, Ohio county, Kentucky, I will on Monday, July 13, 1914, expose at public sale at the court house door in Hartford Ky., between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 3 o'clock p. m. the following lands (houses and lots) or so much thereof as may be necessary to produce the sums required to pay the taxes due from the respective parties to the town of Hartford for the time hereafter set out, viz:

J. C. Carpenter for year 1913 $6.32
J. C. Carpenter for year 1914 $5.08
John Blair for year 1914 $6.32

J. P. STEVENS,

Marshal Town of Hartford, As Collector.

The Blunder and Crime of 1913.

President Wilson says there is "no material condition or substantial reason why the business of the country should not be in the most prosperous condition." If a more humble citizen should make a statement like that the inclination would be to call him a fool or a knave. There is a reason. There is a condition. There are several reasons and conditions why we are suffering such widespread business depression and general distress. An avalanche of foreign goods displacing domestic production has been allowed. A wiping out of our favorable balance of trade means a large foreign account to be settled in gold. Loss of revenue, loss of wages, loss of dividends, less building, less transportation, idle freight cars, increased failures and a still worse outlook, are all conditions and reasons that follow Free-Trade.

If the President is ignorant, the people are not, and next fall we shall see how they begin to rectify a mistake that will mean a restoration of American Protection as soon after the election of 1916 as a Congress in extra session can repair the injury.

The blunder and crime of 1913 will be a lesson that will have to be learned, but posterity may benefit by the awful experience.

Best Diarrhoea Remedy.

If you have ever used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy you know that it is a success. Sam F. Guinn, Whiteley, Ala. writes, "I had measles and got caught out in the rain, and it settled in my stomach and bowels. I had an awful time, and had it not been for Chamberlain's colic, cholera and diarrhoea Remedy I could not possibly have lived but a few hours longer, but thanks to this remedy, I am now well and strong." For sale by all dealers.

Swedish Bridal Superstitions.

In Sweden the bridegroom has a great fear of trolls and sprites, and as an antidote against their power he sews into his clothes various strong-smelling herbs, such as garlic and rosemary. It is customary to fill the bride's pocket with bread, which she gives to the poor she meets on the way to the church, and so averts misfortune with the alms she bestows. On their return from church the bride and bridegroom visit their cow houses and farms that the cattle may thrive and multiply.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

Mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

It Was Lincoln's Knife.
Lincoln was always ready to join in a laugh at his own expense and used to tell the following story with intense enjoyment: "In the days when I used to be on the circuit I was accused in the cars by a stranger, who said, 'Excuse me, sir, but I have an article in my possession which belongs to you.' 'How is that?' I asked, considerably astonished. The stranger took a jack-knife from his pocket. 'This knife,' said he, 'was placed in my hands some years ago with the injunction that I was to keep it until I found a man uglier than myself. I have carried it from that time to this. Allow me to say, sir, that I think you are fairly entitled to the property.' "—"Everyday Life of Abraham Lincoln."

Greatest Song Writers.
The immortal quartet of song writers are Goethe, Heine, Burns and Beranger. Of the four Burns is by far the most popular. Goethe was at heart an "Olympian" and in all things a critic; Heine was in his deepest soul a pessimist and cynic; Beranger, while much more humorous, was a little bit too critical, while Burns, democratic to the core and of immense sympathy, threw himself into the common human life of the world with a whole heart and wrote the songs that will live and be loved while humanity endures.—New York American.

Weight of a Gallon of Milk.
"What is the standard weight for sweet milk?"
A quart of milk weighs 2.155 pounds and a gallon 8.612 pounds, or a quart 2.15 pounds and a gallon 8.6 pounds. It is understood that the temperature of the milk and the relative proportions of the butter fat and solids not butter fat cause the weight of milk to vary, but the weights stated above are those generally used.—Progressive Farmer.

Different Ideas.
"I'm paying all my debts. I believe the end of the world will come next month."
"I don't understand your logic. If I thought the end of the world was coming next month I'd order a lot of stuff on credit now."—Pittsburgh Post.

Self Denial.

GERMAN ARMY OFFICERS HAVEN'T AN EASY LOT

Idols of the People, They Must Keep Up Appearances on Very Small Sum.

Recent scandals and the issue by the Kaiser the other day of a circular forbidding his officers to have any dealings with matrimonial agencies have called attention once again to the peculiar position of the army officer in the German social cosmos and his incessant struggle between extravagance and simplicity of living.

In Germany the officer is, of course, the lion of fashionable and aristocratic society, the object of admiration for the ordinary tradesman, and always a person of absorbing interest, if not always an idol, for the crowd in the street. He is the hero of the schoolgirl and the ornament of every social function of note.

He commands the greater share of the popular interest which in France goes to the new dresses of the day and in England so largely to the smart and youthful aristocracy.

There are two reasons why this should be so. In the first place, the German Empire was founded by the sword, and a great number of the leading statesmen also have been soldiers in their original profession; also the rule that officers shall invariably wear uniform is applied here more strictly than in any other country in Europe. Officers, therefore, are far more frequently noticeable.

Yet a great many of these popular idols—aristocratic as they may be—are poor, as the traditional church mouse. And the pay is so moderate that their parents have to pledge themselves to supply an allowance of $15 a month to a lieutenant in the infantry, $25 a month of an artillery lieutenant, and $35 to a cavalry lieutenant. A few of the crack regiments demand openly a higher allowance, including one of the Guard regiments in Potsdam, which demands $5,000 a year.

The officer must never descend to the level of the rank; he must never ride in the half-penny omnibus, and he is even expected to pay double the usual tip to the caddy and chauffeur. To do all of this on a pay of only two or three hundred a year, including the family allowance, requires the assistance of either a carefully kept account book or a still more carefully chosen money lender.

And when the money market fails, the matrimonial market is often too tempting to be ignored. For America has by no means the monopoly of wealthy daughters willing to bring regenerating bank notes into impoverished aristocratic households.

Tradesmen often seem to count on the idea, and none obtains credit so lightly as the officer in Germany. Hence the first origin of many of the most celebrated causes celebres of recent years, including the recent remarkable case of the Countess Treuberg.

Careful inquiries have shown that money lenders and marriage makers have lately come to play an all too important part in regimental affairs. Therefore the latest order of the Emperor.

HIS CURIOUS FALL.

It Wedged Him Head Down in a Blk In a Steep Cliff.

A personal experience of a highly sensational character is recorded by A. H. Savage Lander in his book "Across Unknown South America."

"The forest near the Secondary river was at first overgrown with dense vegetation that gave us a good deal of work and extra exertion, but after that, when we got some distance from the water, the forest was fairly clean, except of course for the fallen trees. We found troublesome ravines of great depth where streamlets had cut their way through.

"In going down one of those difficult ravines I had an accident that might have been fatal. The ravine, the sides of which were almost vertical, was very narrow—only about ten metres across. We let ourselves down, holding on to a liana. When we reached the bottom we found a tiny brook winding its way between great round boulders that left a space about two feet wide for the water. I began to climb the other side, and I had got to a height of about thirty feet. In order to go up this steep incline I had set one foot against a small tree and I pulled myself up by a liana. Unluckily the liana suddenly gave way. The weight of the load that I had on my shoulders made me lose my balance so that my body described a complete semicircle. I dropped head first from that height on the rocks below.

"Providence once more looked after me on that occasion. On the flight down I already imagined myself dead; but no—my head entered the cavity between two great rocks, against which my shoulders and the load became jammed, while my legs waved wildly in midair. I was forced so hard against the two side rocks that I could not possibly extricate myself. It was only when Benedicto and the new man came to my help and pulled me out that we were able to resume our journey. I was much shaken and a good deal bruised, but otherwise none the worse for that unpleasant fall."

WEIRD DREAM STORY.

The Startling Vision That Saved the Life of Lady Vernon.

The following dream story is told in "The Story of My Life," by Augustus J. C. Hare. The story was told to Mr. Hare in Rome in 1870:

"Lady Vernon dreamed that she saw the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other, crossing the entrance hall, and she awoke with a great start. After awhile she composed herself to sleep again, and she dreamed—she dreamed that she saw the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other, in the middle of the staircase, and she awoke with a great shock. She got up. She thought she could not be quite well, and she took a little salt volatile. At last she fell asleep again, and she dreamed—she dreamed that she saw the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other, standing at her bedroom door, and she awoke in a great terror, and she jumped out of bed, and she said, 'I'll have an end of this; I'll have an end of these foolish imaginations.'

"And she rushed to the door and threw it wide open. And there just outside stood the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other. And when he suddenly saw Lady Vernon in her white nightdress, with her hair streaming down her back, he was so dreadfully frightened that he dropped the candle on the floor and rushed off down the staircase and off to the stables, where there was a horse ready saddled and bridled, on which he meant to have ridden away when he had murdered Lady Vernon. And he rode away without having murdered her at all, and he was never heard of again."

Clews to His Writing.

Sometimes the worst of handwriting becomes intelligible when one grasps the rules, for a man's script—particularly an author's—is frequently made difficult, chiefly by his deliberate or unconscious inversion of the accepted rules of calligraphy. Henry Ward Beecher had a daughter who acted as copyist, and she read him with ease simply by remembering three principles—that in her father's manuscript no dotted letter was meant for an "i," no crossed letter stood for "t" and that no capital letter ever began a sentence.

Two Bore.

"Well, dear Elmo, do you not think that there is a peculiar marriage state with our neighbors? He is always traveling and leaves—ah—his poor wife alone. That must bore her terribly, the poor woman!"

"Well, it is just as one takes it. You are always at home; that is a still greater bore."—Fleegende Blatter.

Easily Settled.

"Well, tell him to telephone to the nearest drugist for all he wants and charge it in the bill."—Baltimore American.

ANDREW JACKSON'S FINE.

How Judge Hall Came to Punish the Doughty General.

When the war of 1812 was over vague rumors of peace drifted into New Orleans, but still Jackson did not feel justified in revoking the martial law, under which he had placed the city. While the city was in this state this peculiar incident started. A man named Louallier was tried as being a spy and was acquitted. This displeased Jackson, and feeling that in the martial law he had complete command of the city, he, in opposition to the court, retained Louallier in prison and sent Judge Hall out of the city with orders not to return until it was regularly posted that peace had been declared or that the enemy had left the coast.

The following day came the overdue notice officially explaining that peace had been declared and that the treaty had been ratified. Upon hearing this Jackson revoked the martial law and set all his prisoners free. Then preparing to send home the detached militia from Louisiana, Tennessee and Kentucky amid the greetings and demonstrations of the populace, Judge Hall returned to the city.

In order to uphold the honor, as it seems of the civil over the martial government, Judge Hall issued, on March 21, an order summoning Jackson to court for contempt of a habeas corpus writ and also to state his reason for so doing. The next day Jackson appeared in court in person. He held a written protest against the decision which was to be given.

Hall then imposed a fine of $1,000, remarking that "the duty was unpleasant, that he could not forget the important services of the defendant to the country, and that in consideration thereof he would not make imprisonment a part of the punishment."

The fine was promptly paid amid cheering of the crowd for the popular hero.—Philadelphia Press.

THEY JUST MADE HIM SING.

When Scanlan Wood Minister Wu and the Chinese Officials.

When W. J. Scanlan was in the show business he invaded Washington on one occasion with a brand new comic opera. In order to give the piece a fine send-off he formulated the plan of sending free tickets for boxes to the president, the cabinet members and other men high in social life.

"That won't do," one of his newspaper friends told him. "Too common. Do something picturesque. Why don't you go after Mr. Wu, the Chinese minister? If you get him he will bring down a lot of other diplomatic people."

Scanlan fell for the proposition and called at the Chinese legation.

"What sort of show is this?" asked Mr. Wu.

"It's a comic opera," replied Scanlan. "Any good jokes in it?"

Scanlan said it was full of good jokes.

"Tell me some of them," commanded Mr. Wu.

Scanlan did so, and Wu got such a series of laughs out of them that he sent for his whole establishment, numbering thirty-two people, and made the embarrassed Scanlan tell them all over again.

"Now," continued Wu, "are there any good songs in this show?"

"The show had so many good songs," declared Scanlan, "that we had to throw some of them away."

"All right," said Wu. "Sing me some of the best."

"I sang them," said Scanlan, telling the story afterward. "But that wasn't so remarkable. I had to sing 'em. There were thirty-two Chinamen to make me sing 'em. The amazing part of the thing was that all thirty-two of them came to see the show that night." —Popular Magazine.

Her Art Not Appreciated.

Vandalizing day at the Royal academy is always an important and interesting function. Canvases and panels that have been thirsty enough to absorb the oil from the whole or portions of the pictures painted upon them have once more the luster of their first painting restored by these pick-me-ups.

Members of the year's hanging committee are always at hand on these occasions to consider suggestions and complaints about their recent labors. The chief complaint was by a lady who found her work had been hung horizontally instead of vertically. Unkind friends cautioned her that possibly it had been accepted on the hort zoutal understanding.—New York Sun.

Why the Boiler Rumbles.

That noisy rumbling and clattering in the kitchen boiler after the gas water heater has been lighted for some time has scared many a woman. The editor of the Monthly Gas Chat says it need alarm no one, as it is caused by the expansion of the water as it is heated from the top of the boiler. The colder water below, rushing up to this place the expanded water above, will often cause a concussion.

STOMACH TROUBLE FOR FIVE YEARS

Majority of Friends Thought Mr. Hughes Would Die, But One Helped Him to Recovery.

Pomeroyton, Ky.—In interesting advices from this place, Mr. A. J. Hughes writes as follows: "I was down with stomach trouble for five (5) years, and would have sick headache so bad, at times, that I thought surely I would die. I tried different treatments, but they did not seem to do me any good. I got so bad, I could not eat or sleep, and all my friends, except one, thought I would die. He advised me to try Thedford's Black-Draught, and quit taking other medicines. I decided to take his advice, although I did not have any confidence in it.

I have now been taking Black-Draught for three months, and it has cured me—haven't had those awful sick headaches since I began using it.

I am so thankful for what Black-Draught has done for me."

Thedford's Black-Draught has been found a very valuable medicine for derangements of the stomach and liver. It is composed of pure, vegetable herbs, contains no dangerous ingredients, and acts gently, yet surely. It can be freely used by young and old, and should be kept in every family chest.

WHO KILLED TECUMSEH STILL A LIVE QUESTION

Louisville Man Credited With Shot That Got Old Indian Chieftain.

Oklahoma City.—The renewal of the controversy as to who killed Tecumseh, the famous Indian war chief, recalls the fact that Tecumseh visited Oklahoma when he was trying to organize his vast confederation, embracing all of the Indian tribes of the Great Lakes, Mississippi Valley and Gulf Coast regions, with which he was endeavoring to check the onward march of the whites and to prevent the establishment of any further white settlements in the Middle West.

It was in late spring of 1811 that Tecumseh came to the village of the Osage chief, Clermont, near the historic Claremore mound, in Rogers Co., Oklahoma. He was accompanied by his brother, "the Prophet." The latter is described as having been a man of commanding presence and an eloquent orator, yet so profound was the impression made upon the Osages by the words of Tecumseh that they scarcely noticed his brother, "the Prophet," at all.

Tecumseh was an impassioned orator, and it was reported at the time that the natural sympathies of the Osages went out to him. However, all of their dealings had been with the French traders from St. Louis, by whom they had always been kindly treated. Those traders were all loyal Americans at that time, so that the weight of their influence was against Tecumseh and his ambitious designs. The Osages, therefore, declined to join Tecumseh.

Tecumseh was probably the most remarkable Indian of whom history takes account. His twin brother, "the Prophet," whose name was Tensquaw, claimed to have been inspired by a message from the Master of Life, in which all of the Indians were directed to band themselves together to resist the further advance of white settlements. Tecumseh not only believed and adopted his brother's teachings, but his own magnetic and persuasive eloquence gave to them an added force and influence.

Tecumseh always disputed the validity of the treaties by which the Government had purchased the land of Ohio and Indiana from the Indians. He claimed that they were not binding upon the Indians for the reason that only the chiefs had entered into such agreements, the warriors not being consulted at all, having thus advocated the doctrine of a practical referendum long before the white men of America ever dreamed of such a system.

The Battle of Tippecanoe, which occurred about six months after Tecumseh's visit to the Osages, really spoiled all of his plans for a confederation of the Indian tribes. He continued to labor for that end until the outbreak of the War of 1812, when he espoused the cause of the British and was commissioned a Brigadier General in the army of King George. His career ended with his death at the Battle of Thames, when he was still in the prime of life, being then about 45 years old.

Col. R. M. Johnson, of Louisville, Ky., has always been given the credit for killing Tecumseh, and was elected Vice President of the United States in 1836 largely on the strength of that record, but the claim is now disputed by Dr. R. A. Spurr, of Lexington, Ky., who says that according to the story told by his uncle, Richard Spurr, a survivor of the famous battle, it was Col. William Whitley and not Col. Johnson who killed Tecumseh. The elder Spurr and Col. Whitley were members of a party of volunteers detailed to start the Indians out of the woods. In a hand-to-hand combat Whitley killed two Indians, being killed by the second one, who shot just as he did. Spurr later recovered Whitley's body and also took in the bodies of the two Indians he killed. The second one, he said, was identified by Gen. Harrison, who knew him well, as being that of Tecumseh.

Tecumseh's name is preserved in Oklahoma in the name of the county seat of Pottawatomie county, where a band of Shawnee Indians, led by Tecumseh's grandson, Wapameeto, better known in Oklahoma as Big Jim lived many years.—Kansas City Times.

Dreaming to Order.
Dreams can be made to order by our alchemists, but not by the dreamer. Yell "Fire!" in the ear of a sound sleeper or allow a sudden draft of cold air to play on the back of his neck and he will dream to order, but he can't go to sleep with his mind made up to dream of any certain thing and then actually dream of it. In spite of this fact, books are sold in Europe which tell what one must do in order to dream the lucky number in the lottery.

Cured of Indigestion.

Mrs. Sallie P. Clawson, Indiana, Pa., was bothered with indigestion. "My stomach pained me night and day," she writes. "I would feel bloated and have the headache and belching after eating. I also suffered from constipation. My daughter had used Chamberlain's Tablets and they did her so much good that she gave me a few doses of them and insisted upon my trying them. They helped me as nothing else has done." For sale by all dealers.

INDIAN MAIDEN MAKES SMALLEST DOLLS

Less Than Three-Quarters of an Inch Long Play Babies

Washington, D. C.—This is the story of Isabel Belansaran, maker of the smallest dolls in the world, who is the quietest figure in Mexico's quaintest town, Cuernavaca, as told by Russell Hastings Millward in a communication to the National Geographical Society, at Washington:

"This little girl is called Queen of the Needle," writes Millward. "The natives of the village will tell you that no cleverer Mexican Indian maiden has ever been known. The diminutive dolls she makes, both in point of construction and design, are the most remarkable in the world."

"The operation of making consists in forming a tiny framework of wire barely three-fourths of an inch in length and winding the figure with many turns of silk thread. After the frame has been properly formed it is ready for dressing. The clothing is cut according to the character of the doll and fitted carefully about the small figure. The most difficult work, that of embroidering, is then begun. With a needle that can scarcely be held in the fingers and the finest of silk threads, various designs are actually embroidered on the clothing, and so cleverly as the work executed that even through a powerful magnifying glass the details of the design appear to be perfect. After dressing the figures it is necessary to add the hair, and what is undoubtedly an example of the tiniest and most marvelous hair-dressing known is then performed on each doll. Even to the details of the braids and ribbons, the work is completely carried out. The eyes, nose, mouth, hands and feet are then formed and the doll is ready to be placed on sale in the village shop.

"On account of their delicacy, exquisite coloring and the workmanship, these dolls find at all times a ready sale at the ridiculously low price of thirty-five cents each. But two hours are required to make each doll, so it can readily be imagined just how rapidly the work must be done, although the finished product shows no signs other than those of artistic skill and extreme patience. By working steadily for ten hours, the sum of $1.25 may be earned. So constantly has this little maiden used her eyes that she is beginning to lose her eyesight.

"Miniature roses are embroidered on the dresses and hung about the shoulders of the dandling-girl dolls. Ornaments are arranged in the hair and the tiny limbs are formed in graceful and lifelike attitudes of dancing. The costume of the matron doll is gaily embroidered in colors and its hair dressed in Spanish style, including the conventional cue. The flower-girl dolls are provided with small baskets woven of fine hair, filled with flowers of variegated colors. It is difficult to believe that human hands could have fashioned such wonderful little figures. The first dolls of this kind made by Isabel were secured by several of the royal families.

"A German traveler criticized the dolls one day, and told the little Indian maiden that in Germany they had fleas fully dressed and trained to perform most wonderful feats. 'Yes,' she answered, 'I remember my father telling how those trained fleas were sent to your country from Mexico. We cannot dress the fleas so completely as the dolls, however, as we can not make them stand still long enough I suppose,' she added, 'natively, you can make fleas stand still as long as you like in Germany.'"

Headache and Nervousness Cured.

SPORTING NEWS

EVEN BREAK WITH EQUALITY.

By batting Withrow at opportune stages Hartford defeated Equality at East End Park Saturday 11 to 5. The game was marked by good and fast fielding on both sides, practically all the scores being the result of clean hits. Two features were the fielding of Cundiff and Welsh. Welsh and Blankenship started for Hartford with Withrow and Thorpe doing the battery work for the visitors. However, toward the latter part of the contest Blankenship was hit on the knee by a swift foul and was forced to retire, Rickard taking his place. Later Welsh replaced Cundiff at short, he Cundiff, donning the mask Rickard climbing the mound. Very few errors were chalked up against either team. Umpire—Vig Morton.

CUNDIFF DIGGING UP A HOT ONE.

Sunday Hartford returned the above game at Centertown and came out the small end by the close score of 6 to 5. It was a battle from start to finish and at the end of the first half of the ninth Hartford apparently held the game sewed up. The home team got off to a two run lead and for several innings the score stood 2 to 0 in their favor. The visitors, however finally managed to tie the score on hits by Cundiff, A. Barnett and Johnson. Equality came back with another and until the first of the ninth it was in their favor 3 to 2. In the first of the said ninth after Taylor and Rickard were out, E. Barnett walked. Elgin hit to right and Plummer, equal to the occasion hit a screaming double. E. Barnett and Elgin scoring. Cundiff scored Plummer with a neat single. A. Barnett doubled to right, the throw in holding Cundiff at third. Schla, catching in place of Blankenship, filed to left ending the rally. Score 5 to 3 in favor of Hartford. Equality then strained their efforts and ran in three more. The bases were filled on a hit, a hit by pitched ball and an error. Johnson wiggled thru the crowd and Rickard, Brown's high foul. Then it was that the aeroplane struck the balloon. Addington hit to Cundiff who fielded the ball perfectly, and started to toss to second for a double, but seeing second uncovered he tried to beat the runner himself. Failing in this he shot to first to catch Addington. The latter collided with Elgin on first and he bill went to the fence, three men scoring. The Hartford team protested as the last runner took two bases on the passed ball, but someone had neglected to inform Umpire Morton of the ground rule as to the passed ball and a question arose. However, after some friendly discussion the Equality fellows acted very squarely with the visitors and sent the runner back to third. Elgin held to retire from the game, Taylor going to first and "Baker" Robertson to second. The next man up hit to deep second and the winning run crossed over.

Vig Morton umpired both games with Equality and his work was entirely satisfactory.

The Hartford players were well pleased with their treatment at Centertown Sunday.

Plummer was "sorter pooped" because his feet appeared to such enormous dimensions in a cartoon last week. We gave him a dope, tho, and he went away contented.

Sporting Writer Hunter is on a strike this week.

Cundiff pulled the classiest bit of fielding seen in these parts for many a day Sunday. A hot roller bounded off Taylor's shin and like a flash the short stop raced over, grabbed up the horse hide and threw the runner out at first, a la big league style.

Hartford will meet Taylor Mines at East End Park Saturday and at Taylor Mines Sunday. The game here will be called about 2:30 or 3:00. The probable line up and batting order for Hartford will be: Plummer, 1. f.; Cundiff, c.; A. Barnett, c. f.; Johnson, 3d.; Welsh, 4d.; Blankenship c.; Rickard, p.; Keown, substitute.

Taylor Mines will have the strongest line up obtainable Saturday. Don't fail to see this big game.

OTHER GAMES.

Taylor Mines defeated Livermore at the latter place Sunday in an old time slugging match by the score of 14 to 13. These teams will meet at Taylor Mines Sunday, July 12.

The Renfrow 2d team played their first game of the season with the Horse Branchist team and defeated them 2 to 1. They will meet the 2d team of Rob Roy in the near future.
